

Public Statement on New Open Access Policy

July 2014

Jordan Publishing Ltd is pleased to announce the implementation of a new Open Access policy. Although we primarily publish reference works, we do publish an important scholarly journal, Child and Family Law Quarterly (CFLQ), as part of our portfolio. We are sensitive to the fact that academic authors considering submission to CFLQ are affected by new funding and open access rules, and we wish to support them by removing any barriers to their submitting articles to the journal.

Our Open Access policy is therefore fully compliant with policies of both the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and Research Council UK (RCUK) guidelines. For new, qualifying article submissions going forward, and with immediate effect, we will offer a “Green OA” option for authors’ articles upon acceptance. Authors will pay no publication fee, and we will make a copy of the peer reviewed manuscript (“post print”) freely available on the Web after an embargo period consistent with the author’s funding agency’s requirements, under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial (CC-BY-NC) licence. We will also deposit article metadata on behalf of the author as necessary in OpenDepot.org.

About Jordan Publishing

Jordan Publishing has a reputation for being at the forefront of supplying legal information through its online services, automated workflows, training, and publications, across 18 areas of law.

Under our two brands, Jordans and Family Law, our books and electronic services offer lawyers the best guidance and with online access to these publications they can gain essential knowledge from leading legal sources plus cases, statutes, statutory instruments, forms and precedents, to deliver formidable legal advice to and for their clients much more quickly.

In addition to our wide range of legal publications we offer CPD accredited training, including full day courses and seminars, annual update conferences and online audio, webinar and journal CPD training.
